SIGNATURE WORKSHOPS

In building equitable culture, your organization strives to make change in a society built on the foundations of white supremacy and racial disparity. Nicole's messages will enliven your audiences and embolden them to undertake the hard work of inclusion every day.

From leadership topics that address hiring and mentoring across differences, to team discussions about mitigating bias and microaggressions, our goal is to equip organizations to build culture that is inclusive and sustainable.

Cultural competency and strategic planning for DEI are vital to the success of building racially equitable workspaces. Nicole's workshops are driven by research and founded on real-life skills that help participants create new patterns of thinking that make change possible.

Leading in These Times: Diversity, Equity Inclusion in Challenging, Changing Times // As you are looking at building equitable culture, you need to consider topics like shared language, bias, microaggressions, managing challenging conversations, and more. How do we do this work to strengthen our teams while also promoting positive culture transformation in our organization and beyond. During this talk, we discuss the dynamics of these changing times and how you and your team can harness these times for future success.

Equity & Inclusion: A Business Imperative // Making a business case for equity and inclusion in organizations is one important way to engage internal and external stakeholders. Get the tools you need to be able to convince naysayers and get to strategic action on all fronts—not just DEI—and use DEI to improve overall business outcomes.

Developing DEI Committees // When developing a diversity, equity, and inclusion council for your organization, there are many aspects to consider: who should be on it, how should it function, where should the committee focus its efforts, what outcomes should be expected, etc. Let's work on the details together to help make your efforts a success.
